

ABSTRACT

An apparatus comprises a first device comprising a carrier having one or more conductive areas to form a portion of an electromagnetic coupler and a socket to mount the first device relative to a second device having one or more conductive areas to form the 5 electromagnetic coupler. The socket defines a coupler region in which the carrier is inserted to align the carrier relative to the second device.